Bellman & Black is a heart-thumpingly perfect ghost story, beautifully and irresistibly written, its ratcheting tension exquisitely calibrated line by line. Its hero is William Bellman, who, as a boy of 10, killed a shiny black rook with a catapult, and who grew up to be someone, his neighbours think, who "could go to the good or the bad."

Black was offering Bellman a chance to get on with grieving, come out the other side, and perhaps live a full life, not the silly life of folly Bellman was living. Bellman kept offering Black money but money is of no importance to Black. Black thinks Bellman is a tragic tale, a human who tried desperately to be without Thought or Memory. Black was trying to get Bellman to face life, so Bellman ...

I think Black was the ghost of the rook Will killed when he was 10, after which the boy with black hair appeared. The deal - spare Dora; why take 10 years for the rook to take Bellman? We learn that rooks are memory keepers who follow our lives. They refer to us, in groups, as an entertainment of people. So, I am unclear whether Black would have followed Bellman's life had Bellman not killed ...
